The Brown vs. the Dunn Family.
The Madison State Journal republishes some amusing passages from the notorious Democratic State Convention of 1855, which nominated Barstow for Governor, McArthur for Lieut. Governor, Johnson for Secretary of State, &c. Before the Convention met, "the Fort" had made up the ticket, putting John A. Brown, brother of Barstow, for Governor. This arrangement, however, was afterwards abandoned and John Brown was elected, and when it leaked out, just before the election, he was elected.

Mr. President—I rise to withdraw the name of John A. Brown, as a candidate for Secretary of State before this Convention. I confess that I am in position, after the manner of the Convention, to be a candidate for the office, but I do not desire to be. I have no objection to the Convention, but I do not desire to be a candidate for the office. I have no objection to the Convention, but I do not desire to be a candidate for the office.

It is recommended that each Assembly District send two delegates, and it is hoped that good and true Republicans from all parts of the State will attend and aid the Convention by their presence and count.

The Democratic Convention at Prairie du Chien adopted without adopting any resolutions. They nominated a candidate but they gave him no platform to stand on—Madison Journal.

They dare not show their Principles.

The list of the members of the Convention shows that the same influences operated at Prairie du Chien, which proved potential at Racine. Among the prominent actors occur the well-known names of Moses M. Erskine, W. L. Dwyer, J. H. Barker, Geo. B. Smith, J. K. Potter, W. J. Gilling, J. D. Barker, J. O. Haverstick, &c.

Charles Mackay in a Slave Pen.
The following is from a recent letter of Charles Mackay to the London Illustrated Weekly. On my first arrival at New Orleans, I lingered for a few moments at the open door of a slave pen, looking out upon the city, and the sea, and the sky. I was looking out upon the city, and the sea, and the sky.

From front to rear a wide hall, dividing the house equally, making two small rooms in each. The hall was a wide hall, dividing the house equally, making two small rooms in each.

The tidings of his death spread rapidly on Saturday. Lodges of Masons were convened that evening, and arrangements made in places as usual. The tidings of his death spread rapidly on Saturday.

At the entrance of the dining-room stood two Arab slaves, richly attired. To each lady as she entered, one of these held a beautiful silver bowl, while the other poured rosewater over her hands. The entrance of the dining-room stood two Arab slaves, richly attired.
